

What happens if I withdraw from a class for a course?

Withdrawing from a class may result in you having to return a portion of your financial aid.

If you withdraw or stop attending your class(es) a portion of your financial aid may need to be returned to the U.S. Department of Education or the state. This is known as Return of Title IV (R2T4) and could result in you owing money to the college or directly to the U.S. Department of Education.

Always contact the Office of Financial Aid before making changes to your enrollment, as the change could be the difference in receiving financial aid or not.
